ACTRIS Science Conference 2026

In this second physical edition, this international conference brings together researchers investigating atmospheric composition and interactions, air quality, and climate feedbacks, along with their impacts on human health and sustainable development.

The ACTRIS Science Conference 2026 is hosted by the Research Council of Norway and the Norwegian Institute for Air Research (NILU), a core ACTRIS partner through its role in the ACTRIS Data Centre.

The conference will be structured around keynote and oral sessions and more interactive moments such as scientific poster presentations, the exhibition and an opening ceremony.

Long-term trends and variability of the atmospheric composition

Atmospheric processes in the natural or controlled atmospheres

Air quality and health

Innovative technologies and methodologies for atmospheric probing

Extreme events and emerging scientific topics in atmospheric sciences

Zorana Jovanovic Andersen

Professor in Environmental Epidemiology
University of Copenhagen

Björn Frommknecht

EarthCARE Mission Manager
European Space Agency

Bjørn Samset

Senior Researcher
Centre for International
Climate Research (CiCERO)

Oslo, Norway - The venue

Hosted by: nilu  The Research Council of Norway

NILU's expertise in air quality and climate science, and Norway's active role in ACTRIS research make Oslo a fitting location for the 2026 Conference.

The venue is located at the Scandic Fornebu Hotel, just 10 minutes from the city center. With stunning views of the Oslo Fjord, Scandic Fornebu Hotel is one of the largest conference hotels in Eastern Norway. Blending indoors with out spacious terrace, the hotel combines modern comfort with the beauty of its coastal surroundings. Here, nature is part of the venue; beaches, hiking trails, and marine life are right outside the door.

What's more? Oslo is connected by direct flights from major European cities. Scandic Fornebu Hotel is located 45 minutes by car from Oslo Gardermoen Airport (OSL).
